

It is Just Natural To Admire Babies

Our altruistic nature impels love for the young infant. And at the same time the subject of motherhood is ever before us. To know what to do that will add to the physical comfort of expectant motherhood is a subject that has interested most women of all times. One of the real helpful things is an external abdominal application and in most drug stores under the name of "Mother's Friend." We have known so many grand mothers, who in their younger days relied upon this remedy, and who recommended it to their own daughters that it certainly must be what its name indicates. They have used it for its direct influence upon the muscles, cords, ligaments and tendons as it aims to afford relief from the strain and pain so often unaccountably severe during the period of expectancy.

Every woman should mention "Mother's Friend" when the doctor is the subject of conversation. An interesting little book is mailed free upon application to Bradfield's Register Co., 405 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It refers to many things that women like to read about.

Get or recommend a bottle of "Mother's Friend" today and write for the book.

OLD TIME BARBACUE TO BE FEATURED AT CARRIZOZO CELEBRATION

Carrizozo, Sept. 28.—The several committees in charge of the arrangements for the two field days to be held here October 2nd and 3rd, have made their reports. The program has been arranged, subject to some changes, and everything points to the most successful celebration ever pulled off in Lincoln county. It is the intention to have two basketball games, horse racing, foot racing, baseball games on the first day and a dance at night. On the second day will be held a big barbecue, at which barbecued meat, bread, pickles and other substantial foods will be supplied free to all, and in sufficient quantity to feed the entire county, most of the inhabitants of which are expected to be present. The barbecue will be followed by a basketball game between the winners of the two games held the day before, which is to decide the basketball championship of Lincoln county, goat roping contests, another baseball game, foot racing, horse racing and field sports of various kinds, and followed by another grand ball at night.

Negotiations are under way with the basketball teams of El Paso, Alamogordo, Fort Stanton and other towns on the line.

Acreage for Agriculture In Forest Is Scattered

No Bonanza Tracts for Would-Be Settlers in Manzano Reserve; Interesting Information Sent Out by Supervisor Mullen to Inquirers After Homestead Chances; Uncertainty of Rain, Short Growing Season, and Winds Some of the Setbacks of Farming.

Supervisor James F. Mullen, the chief of the Manzano forest, has been busy for a week or more answering queries about homesteads in his domain. As told several days ago, an article on homesteading in national forests in "The Country Gentleman" led to a flood of inquiries to the Manzano office in the federal building. They came from as far away as Saskatchewan.

The following is the general reply that Mr. Mullen makes to queries regarding the Manzano forest and homesteading possibilities in it; as will be noticed by the reader, the Manzano offers no opportunities for the acquisition of bonanza farms. In connection with this communication Mr. Mullen sends all the printed matter at hand on the forest, and answers any specific question put by the correspondent.

Information on Manzano.
The Manzano national forest, writes Mr. Mullen, covers a chain of mountains about 16 miles wide paralleling the Rio Grande at an average distance of 15 miles, extending 20 miles north and 70 miles south of a point 15 miles east of Albuquerque, a city of 15,000 population, in the Rio Grande valley at an elevation of 5,000 feet above sea level.

The mesas or tablelands surrounding the mountains are at elevations of 6,000 to 6,500 feet, while the mountain tops are at elevations from 9,000 to almost 11,000 feet. The land fit for agriculture is at an elevation of 5,500 to 6,000 feet, usually located on the benches in the canyons and on low ridges between the higher mountains. Very good roads to all market points. The average precipitation is 12 to 16 inches. The rainy season is usually in July or August but varies from May to September. Growing season, middle of May to middle of September. Setbacks to successful farming are uncertainty of rainy season, short growing season, cold night, hot days and high winds which dry out the soil. The soil is yellow and red clay, some light mixture of sand. Most wells are sunk 100 feet before water is found. There are wells from 50 to 500 feet deep to reach water. There are no rivers, creeks of large streams of permanent running water. The canyon beds are usually dry but run full with flood water at intervals during the rainy season. All irrigable land which is along the small mountain streams has been taken up. Farming and stock raising on a small scale is probably the best means of livelihood. This is practiced by the present population of about 1,500, composed principally of Spanish-Americans.

Zuni Division Tracts.
The Zuni division of the Manzano national forest covers a broken chain of mountains in the south half of the northwest quarter of New Mexico. There are some 20 different tracts scattered throughout an area of 5,000 square miles within a radius of 30 to 50 miles from Gallup, a city of about 3,000 population located on the Santa Fe railroad not far from the Arizona line. The forest areas cover the highest mountain country and continental divide. The mesas or tablelands around the mountains are about 7,000 feet in elevation, while the top of Mt. Taylor is about 11,400 feet above sea level. The land fit for agriculture is at an average elevation of 5,000 feet in the canyons and basins near the mountains. The roads are very good in some parts but on the whole may be termed fair for marketing a distance of 20 miles. The average precipitation is about 16 inches. The rainy season is usually July or August, but may vary from May to September. Growing season, last of May to first of September. Setbacks to successful farming—very short growing season, cold nights and high winds, also the early fall rains which prevent harvesting. Soil is black loam, red clay, sand mixtures with clay in many parts is very rich and crops do well in protected places. Wells are from 20 to 100 feet deep, some places they are much deeper, even to 300 feet. Farming, raising of forage for winter feed and stock raising on small scale is best means of livelihood. No rivers with continual flow, some small creeks, no open land irrigable from running water. Very small population within the forest, which is in the center of the Indian country. The Navajo Indian country is on the north while the Pueblo (Zuni, Acoma and Laguna) Indian country is on the south.

Great Local Demand.
A great deal of the agricultural land has been opened to settlement and all land found upon examination to be chiefly valuable for agriculture will be opened. The local demand for opportunities to homestead is so great that persons on the ground have in the majority of instances discovered the land and established a preference right to it long in advance of its listing for settlement. Although the total acreage of agricultural tracts within the forests is large, it is very scattered and forms only a very insignificant percentage of the total national forest area, which is mostly mountainous land far too high and rough for agriculture. Local forest officers can sometimes direct applicants who present themselves in person to portions of the forests in which they might find land which they would regard as suitable for homesteading; but too many uncertainties are involved to make it advisable to attempt to inform persons at a distance by correspondence concerning the agricultural possibilities in any specific neighborhood. In the nature of the case, those who are on the ground will find the best land, and persons unfamiliar with local conditions should seek information from some friend residing in the vicinity before deciding to incur the expense incident to a trip from distant parts of the country.

IF BACKACHEY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER
Eat Less Meat. Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.
Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get phagogen, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overworking kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TWICHELL COMES TO UNIVERSITY FACULTY

Specialist in Tuberculosis to Move from Silver City to Albuquerque October 1st to Make His Home.

Silver City, N. M., Sept. 23.—Dr. David C. Twichell, who for the past ten months has been associate physician in the New Mexico College hospital, has resigned his position and leaves on the first of October for Albuquerque. He will be connected with the University of New Mexico, giving part of his time to the work of that institution and the balance to the private practice of his profession, which is limited to tuberculosis.

Dr. Twichell is the son of the Rev. Joseph H. Twichell of Hartford, Conn., one of the most eminent and distinguished ministers of the Congregational church. His father was an intimate and personal friend of Mark Twain and other literary celebrities and served during the Civil War as chaplain of General Dan Sickles' famous brigade.

Dr. Twichell is a graduate of Yale, class of '98, and served during the Spanish war in a Connecticut regiment. He graduated in medicine at Columbia. He will be a decided acquisition to the faculty of the university, which is to be congratulated upon obtaining his services. He is a distinguished investigator, especially in tuberculosis problems, and with his valuable aid the university may be able to elucidate some of the problems that baffle medical men and also place high altitudes on a scientific basis.

Dr. Twichell will be succeeded at the sanatorium by Dr. J. D. Loewy, who was for six years connected with the medical side of the work on the Panama canal. Dr. Mason E. Henry, who was also in the canal zone, has been added to the medical staff as pathologist and skinographer.

BIG POULTRYMAN HAS 200 ENTRIES FOR FAIR
A. T. Modlin, who owns a big poultry farm in Dallas, Texas, the largest, he claims, in the south, has written to Superintendent John Ruck, of the poultry department of the state fair, asking for space for 200 entries. He is at present preparing exhibiting at the fair at Oklahoma City, Okla.

Mr. Modlin writes that he has ornamental birds of all sorts and from all countries.
